Key Points:

- Bali and Riau Islands reopened borders for fully vaccinated international tourists from 19 countries on October 14. The UK, the US, and Australia were not on this list.
- These travelers still must undergo mandatory 5-day quarantine in state-approved hotels and a PCR test upon arrival.
- The Indonesian government set a target of 77% of the population fully vaccinated by April 2022, and this target is said to achieve herd immunity.

Info for Travelers:

- Prevention measures graded by PPKM Levels 1-4 are in place across the country until November 1.
- Jakarta and Bali are under Level 2, with limitations on dine-in and capacity at selected tourist attractions.
- RT-PCR test, being fully vaccinated, required for domestic flights in Java-Bali.

Extra Notes/Looking Ahead:

- The US has lowered Indonesia's risk level to 1. Australia also removed its 'do not travel' advisory for Indonesia and is in talks to set up a travel lane.
- These developments mean we are anxiously awaiting news of further openings in Bali and across Indonesia more widely.
